Golf is very challenging no matter how long you've played the game. New players rightly feel overwhelmed watching experienced golfers hit the ball toward a par 4, perhaps not realizing "par" is an extraordinarily high standard even for people with above average skills.

Our first goal is to set a reasonable standard for beginners. Unrealistic expectations are the single biggest obstacle to enjoyment of golf, and unmet expectations are at least partly to blame for the fact that very, very few people who give golf a try actually stick with it.

Once we have a realistic idea of the challenge before us, we will get to work in a series of practice sessions that will focus on:

- Basic golf terminology and concepts
- Feeling comfortable with etiquette
- Skills and fundamentals that start near the hole and work backwards
- How to practice off the golf course
- Using the practice area to simulate play on the golf course

Let's begin your golf journey by discovering some enjoyment from the start!
